

Where science, humanity, and meaningful change meet.

Translating the science of stress and the nervous system into practical, human tools for living, working, learning, and leading.

Chronic stress is rarely a matter of willpower. It lives in the body, shapes how people think and relate, and quietly wears down the cultures they work in. We help individuals, teams, and organizations understand what is happening in the nervous system and build the everyday capacity to meet it.

WHAT WE OFFER

Education & Workshops

Nervous system education for teams, schools, and communities.

Individual Sessions

Practical nervous system education and regulation practices tailored to the individual.

Leadership & Teams

Helping leaders steady themselves and their teams.

Resilience & Well-Being Programs

Sustained learning and practical support for people working in high-demand environments.

Speaking

Keynotes, panels, and facilitated conversations.

Consulting

Strategic guidance for healthier organizational conditions.

WHO WE WORK WITH

Individuals & communities

- Individuals building everyday regulation and capacity
- Students, educators, and school communities
- Healthcare professionals and first responders
- Community groups and the people who hold them together

Leaders & organizations

- Leaders and teams carrying sustained pressure
- Healthcare systems, agencies, and schools
- Nonprofits, employers, and community partners
- Ask for our program sheet for formats and scope

WHO LEADS THIS WORK

Darlene Erich, MBA, BSN, RN

Healthcare Executive · Nervous System Leadership Educator · Speaker

Decades in critical care, palliative care, and hospice nursing, alongside healthcare executive leadership and years as a Pilates teacher trainer. That combination is the heart of this work: rigorous about the science, unhurried with people, grounded in what happens at the bedside and in the boardroom. Darlene also serves as Director of Somatic Self-Regulation & Well-Being with LEAD Futures Foundation, extending this work into community-based initiatives.

Our work is educational and supportive. It is not psychotherapy, counseling, or medical care, and it complements rather than replaces care from licensed professionals.

Let's find the right starting point.

We're glad to talk through fit before anything is scheduled.

darlene@startingpointconsulting.com

startingpointconsulting.com